Course Description: References to sport are everywhere — on clothes, on television, on billboards. Governments and businesses rely on sport to shape their images. Education and healthcare systems rely on sport to shape healthy, involved citizens. Sport is part of our educational system, and part of our national mythology, it is an important and pervasive aspect of contemporary North American culture. For many of us, sport is key to our personal identities; it helps define who we are. Sport is fitness, nationalism, entertainment, and a huge industry. In this class we will try to come to a better understanding of the place of sport in contemporary society and how it works as an institution, a symbol, and a source of pleasure or pain in everyday life. We will be particularly concerned with the ways that different social factors shape people's experiences of sport and the way that sport can both challenge and contribute to social inequality. To help us in our discussions, we will draw on ideas and insights from the field of sociology. We will also draw on our own experiences as people who participate in sport in various ways, as athletes, coaches, officials, spectators, and consumers of sporting media and goods.		Course Text: Readings will be provided on OnQ.
